

Contributors

Dede-Esi Amanor-Wilks is ActionAid's International Director for West & Central Africa. Before joining ActionAid in 2007, Amanor-Wilks spent several years at the London School of Economics, where she wrote a thesis on the peasant-settler dichotomy in Africa and taught the foundation course in economic history. She was formerly the Africa Director of IPS news agency, based in Harare, and before that East Africa and later Francophone Africa editor of Africa Economic Digest magazine in London. She began her professional life at Third World Communications, moving on to African Concord and West Africa magazines. She currently resides in Kenya.

A. Atia Apusigah is a Cultural Analyst with special interests in educational reforms, gender justice, political economy of development and indigenous knowledge systems. She is a senior lecturer at the Department of African and General Studies and Department of Education Studies in the University for Development Studies, Ghana. Her most recent publications include Endogenous Development in Africa: Toward a Systemization of Experiences, which she co-edited with David Millar and Claire Boonzaaijjer. She is also the editor of the Ghana Journal of Development Studies (GJDS) and Studies in Gender and Development in Africa (SIGADA).

Akua Opokua Britwum is a Senior Research Fellow at the Institute for Development Studies, University of Cape Coast, in Ghana where she is engaged in teaching and research in the areas of gender and labour studies. Her publications cover gender-based violence, gender and economic participation as well as trade union democracy and informal economy labour force organisation.

Patricia Kameri-Mbote is a Professor of Law at Strathmore University Nairobi. She previously taught at the School of Law, University of Nairobi and is an internationally renowned scholar; and a Senior Advocate of the High Court of Kenya. She holds a Doctorate in Law from Stanford University, having studied law previously in Nairobi, Warwick, and Zimbabwe. She has served as a policy scholar at the Woodrow Wilson International Center for Scholars and taught law at the Universities of Kansas, Stellenbosch and Zimbabwe. She has published a number of books and many articles in international journals and in the areas of environment, property and gender.

Kujejatou Manneh-Jallow, who has a PhD in management of small-scale women farmers' agricultural projects, has been the country director of ActionAid in the Gambia for the last three years. She has 35 years of experience working in the Gambia's Ministry of Agriculture at different levels, mainly with women farmers, as district extension worker, in-service trainer, co-editor of a field workers' magazine (Senela), Head of Food and Nutrition Unit, Head of Horticulture Unit of DAS, Principal Officer responsible for Food Security issues and as the gender focal point. She was the Executive Director of the National Women Farmers' Association (NAWFA) for more than seven years.

Marjorie Mbilinyi is a scholar activist and founder member of several feminist organizations and networks in Tanzania and Africa, including the Tanzania Gender Networking Programme, the Feminist Activist Coalition, and Gender and Economic Reforms in Africa, GERA. Marjorie Mbilinyi has extensive experience in participatory organizing, pedagogy and research at national and community-level, linked to feminist advocacy and activism. Recent co-edited books include Activist Voices, Against-Neoliberalism, Nyerere on Education Vol. 1, and Food is Politics.

Gloria Shechambo is a graduate student of the University of Dar-es-Salaam, a Policy Analyst and Researcher at Tanzania Gender Networking Programme. She is a trained theatre artist who has directed, starred and designed in both short films and theatre performances for local and international audiences; and a former local TV show presenter. Gloria coordinated the Popular Feminist Life History research; coordinates the Budget Analysis Task Team of TGNP and is a member of the East African Uongozi (Leadership) Institute, and the Tanzania Young Feminist Forum. Her recent writings include a dissertation on Gender, TV and Children (forthcoming).

Dzodzi Tsikata is a Senior Research Fellow at Institute of Statistical, Social and Economic Research (ISSER) and Deputy Head of the Centre for Gender Studies and Advocacy (CEGENSA) at the University of Ghana. She has written extensively on the implications of gendered resource tenures and labour relations for women's livelihoods in rural and urban Ghana. Her recent publications include the book Living in the Shadow of the Large Dams: Long Term Responses of Lakeside and Downstream Communities of Ghana's Volta River Project and a forthcoming co-edited book (with Pamela Golah) Land Tenure, Gender and Globalisation: Research and Analysis from Africa, Asia and Latin America.

Cassandra R. Veney is an Associate Professor in the Department of Political Science at Loyola Marymount University. She is the author of Forced Migration in Eastern Africa: Democratization, Structural Adjustment, and Refugees (Palgrave-Macmillan, 2007). She is the co-editor of Women's Scholarly Publishing in African Studies (Africa World Press, 2001) and Leisure in Urban Africa (Africa World Press, 2003). She has published book chapters and journal articles on refugee women in Kenya and Tanzania, internally displaced women in Liberia and Uganda, and human rights in Africa-US relations.